COOKIE POLICY

Finely Sorted Organizing, LLC

1. About this policy

This Cookie Policy explains how Finely Sorted Organizing, LLC ("FSO," "we," "us," or "our") may use cookies and similar technologies on finelysorted.com and through features linked to or embedded in the website. FSO is a Maine-formed limited liability company operating from California and offering services nationwide in the United States. The website may be visited from other countries, although FSO does not currently target the EU or UK as an audience.

This policy should be read with our Privacy Policy. It describes the technologies reported as used or intended for use, but the live behavior of every script, cookie, pixel, and embedded service has not been independently verified. If a privacy law that applies to you provides rights or protections beyond those described here, this policy does not limit those rights.

2. Cookies and similar technologies

Cookies are small files stored by a website or service on your device. Similar technologies can include pixels, tags, scripts, browser local storage, and embedded content. They may help a website operate, protect forms, remember choices, measure traffic, schedule appointments, process payments, or measure advertising.

The supplied consent-code sample stores a consent record in browser local storage using the key "cookieConsent." Local storage is not itself a cookie. The sample is designed to treat a saved consent choice as expired after approximately 182 days (about six months). This period is for the consent record and does not confirm the lifespan of any vendor cookie or other data.

3. Technologies and services

Strictly necessary and security technologies. The consent sample labels strictly necessary technologies as always on. Cloudflare Turnstile is reported to be used on the contact form. It may help distinguish legitimate form activity from automated or abusive traffic. The actual cookies or storage used by Turnstile and whether all its requests are necessary for security have not been verified.

Analytics: Google Analytics. Google Analytics is installed. The sample is designed to load Google Analytics only after analytics consent, but the sample contains a placeholder ID ("G-XXXXXXX"). The real configuration and live behavior have not been confirmed. Depending on settings, analytics may process information such as browser and device details, online identifiers, pages viewed, interactions, referral information, and technical data that can indicate approximate location.

Email sign-up and marketing: Mailchimp. Mailchimp and a Mailchimp sign-up form or tracking script are reported as installed. The sample is designed to load a Mailchimp-connected script after the visitor enables the marketing preference, but the sample URL contains placeholder account identifiers. The live URL, any other Mailchimp scripts, and the actual data collected have not been verified.

Advertising: Google Ads and Meta Pixel. FSO has confirmed that Google Ads tracking code has been added to the website. It has not yet been tested to confirm whether it fires, what information it collects, or whether it is blocked before the visitor makes a consent choice. The supplied consent-code sample still contains a placeholder Google Ads ID ("AW-XXXXXXX") and says Google Ads is not yet active, so the sample may not reflect the live website code. FSO has also reported that Meta Pixel may be installed, but its installation and activity remain unconfirmed. If active, advertising technologies may measure ad performance or use browser activity and identifiers for advertising, audience measurement, or targeted advertising, depending on configuration and applicable law.

Scheduling: Calendly. Calendly is reported as embedded on the website. An embedded scheduling service may make requests to the provider and may use cookies or similar technologies. The supplied sample does not establish what Calendly stores or whether its content is blocked until consent.

Payments: Stripe. Stripe checkout or payment links are reported as used. Stripe may process information and use technologies needed to provide payment, prevent fraud, secure transactions, and support its services. The supplied sample does not establish whether Stripe content is embedded directly on the site or opened on a Stripe-hosted page, nor which cookies or storage are used in the actual flow.

Other technologies. The website may use hosting, security, form, or site-function technologies needed to deliver the site. We will update this policy if our use of material technologies changes.

4. Consent banner and preferences

FSO reports that the consent banner is live and that the preference link is available on every page. The supplied code sample offers "Accept All," "Reject Non-Essential," and "Customize," with controls for analytics and marketing. It is designed to store the choice in browser local storage and display the banner again after the saved choice expires after about six months.

However, FSO has not confirmed that every script or embedded service is blocked until a visitor makes a choice. Some tracking may start before consent. The consent interface alone does not prove that the technical blocking works. Until testing confirms otherwise, visitors should not assume that rejecting optional technologies prevents every third-party request.

The sample groups Mailchimp, Google Ads, and Meta Pixel together under one marketing preference. It does not offer separate choices for each of those services. If separate choices are required by applicable law or are needed to make the choices clear and meaningful, the preference tool must be updated.

5. Your choices and applicable privacy rights

When the banner is presented, you can accept all optional categories, reject non-essential categories, or customize the choices shown. FSO reports that a preference link is available on every page so you can reopen the preferences. If the link does not work, contact info@finelysorted.com.

Depending on your location, the nature of the processing, and the law that applies, you may have rights to opt out of targeted advertising, the sale or sharing of personal information, or certain profiling; to access, correct, delete, or obtain a copy of personal information; to withdraw consent or object to certain processing; or to complain to a data-protection authority. Some laws also require prior consent for certain cookies or similar technologies. Rights, exceptions, response periods, and verification requirements vary by law. We will not use this policy to waive, narrow, or deny a right that applicable law makes mandatory.

To make a privacy request, email info@finelysorted.com and describe the request and the website or service involved. Do not include passwords or payment-card details. We may ask for information reasonably necessary to verify and respond to a request where the law permits or requires verification.

6. Global Privacy Control and advertising opt-outs

The sample code attempts to detect the Global Privacy Control (GPC) browser signal and treat it as an opt-out. This behavior has not been tested on the live site. In the supplied code, the script checks for an existing saved consent choice before it checks for GPC. A previously saved choice may therefore be applied before the GPC signal is considered. The code should be reviewed and corrected so a valid GPC signal is honored wherever required by applicable law.

The sample includes a footer link labeled “Do Not Sell or Share My Personal Information” that opens the preferences panel. The presence of that link does not by itself establish that FSO sells or shares personal information, that an opt-out is successfully transmitted to all vendors, or that every applicable legal requirement is met. If advertising technologies disclose personal information for cross-context behavioral advertising or other regulated purposes, FSO must assess those data flows and provide the opt-out rights and mechanisms required by applicable law.

7. Third-party providers

The website may connect to Google, Mailchimp, Meta, Calendly, Stripe, and Cloudflare. These providers may process information under their own terms and privacy notices. The exact data collected, recipients, processing locations, cookie names, and retention periods depend on the live setup and each provider’s settings. This policy does not promise that any specific cookie is used, or state a vendor-specific retention period, unless FSO has confirmed it for the live configuration.

8. Retention

FSO has not yet confirmed the cookie names, storage identifiers, or retention periods used by the live website and third-party services. The only duration specified in the supplied sample is the approximately 182-day validity period for the browser's saved consent record. A complete inventory and vendor-settings review are needed before FSO can accurately describe the lifetimes of other cookies and similar technologies.

9. International visitors

The website may be accessible internationally, but FSO does not currently target EU or UK residents as an audience. A visitor's location and FSO's actual activities may affect which privacy and cookie laws apply. Where applicable law requires prior consent for non-essential cookies or similar technologies, those technologies should not be activated before valid consent unless a legal exception applies. FSO has not yet verified that the current implementation meets this requirement in every relevant jurisdiction.

Browser settings may allow you to block or delete cookies, but blocking them may affect website functions and may not stop all forms of tracking or reverse information already collected.

10. Changes to this policy

We may update this policy when the website, vendors, technologies, or applicable legal requirements change. We will revise the "Last updated" date when we make a substantive change and provide notice or request renewed consent where required by law.
